Helping Yourself, or a Friend

SUICIDE PREVENTION
Tips and Resources for Teens and Parents

Always take any comments about hurting oneself or killing oneself seriously.
If you are concerned about someone, ask yourself the following:

Is your gut telling you to be worried because your friend has withdrawn from everyone and everything? Become more worried or on edge? Seems unusually angry, or just not normal to you?

Has your friend or family member shown or shared any of the following?

- Talking about wanting to die or be dead; suicide; or a suicide plan.
- Engaging in risky behaviors such as cutting, burning, or abusing substances.
- Feeling as though things will never get better.
- Struggling to deal with a big loss in his/her life.
- Seeming as if he or she is in terrible emotional pain (like something is wrong deep inside that won’t go away).

How to Help: Tips for Talking About Suicide

Knowing what to say to a friend when you’re worried can be tough. Use these tips to help you find the words to tell your friend you care:

➢ Ask how your friend is feeling, and whether your friend is OK. Listen like a true friend.
➢ Find out if your friend feels safe.
➢ Tell your friend you are worried, and that he/she is not alone.
➢ Talk to an adult you trust about your concerns.

To help a friend you can call the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline
1-800-273-8255 or text “CONNECT” to 85511.

Do not leave someone alone who has made a plan and has acquired the means to carry out the plan. Get professional help immediately.

Some of the things you’ve said lately worry me, and you’ve been acting different. Are you OK?

I don’t know

What’s going on?

I just feel really sad all the time.

Thanks for telling me. I really care about you and want to help.

Thanks

WHAT NOT TO DO

Don’t promise to keep a suicide threat secret. Your friend may ask you not to tell anyone about suicidal threats or plans, and may ask you to promise. Do not make that promise. TELL someone.

Don’t ignore your friend. It takes courage to ask for help so don’t brush off your friend’s appeal for help. If you ignore your friend, it may discourage your friend from seeking help from someone else.

Don’t be afraid to ask your friend if he or she is thinking about suicide and has a plan—these are important questions.

Tell someone. Ask for help.
